

I am deeply disturbed at Sinclair media's obvious attempt to champion a single candidate over another. According to the laws that you are supposed to enforce, a media conglomerate like this cannot simply decide who they want to win, and then schedule programming selectively to serve that end. That is exactly what Sinclair media is doing; it's pretty obvious. They have refused to say the names of those killed in Iraq because it would be too overtly political, yet they are more than happy to show a film with dubious charges about Kerry's past. Biased? Honoring our fallen soldiers is too political but an anti-Kerry film isn't? Please. To add insult to injury, they are trying to circumvent your laws preventing them from bias by calling this stuff "news programming."

The question I have for you at the FCC is this: are you guys for real? Are you going to enforce the laws and make these media conglomerates serve the public good in a fair way, or are you going to roll over and let them do whatever they please? I hope that you will act honorably and do the right and fair thing.
